

Acupuncture point to know!
compiled by Debby Rothman

This was printed inspired by Dr. Schoen wanting everyone to know about this acupuncture point.

The acupuncture point is call GV 26, a point on the Governing Vessel meridian. This emergency point can be stimulated with an acupuncture needle or fingernail to revive an unconscious animal.

"In his book Love, Miracles and Animal Healing, Alan Schoen, DVM, describes how, shortly after he gave an acupuncture demonstration at a veterinary clinic, technicians rushed into the emergency room with a 12-year old German Shepherd whose heart had stopped after surgery. The veterinarians on duty inserted a tube down the dog's throat, administered manual cardiac massage, injected the dog with epinephrine and bicarbonate, then wired him to electrodes and gave him electric shocks.

The dog's EKG traced a flat line and he pronounced dead. A technician was about to disconnect the oxygen when Schoen asked if he could try. He inserted an acupuncture needle at the center of the dog's upper lip, halfway between nose and mouth, and gave it several short jabs. Within seconds, the dog began breathing and his heartbeat resumed.
